The maximum configuration of 60 ultimately depends on the type of handset combinations you decide on. Maximum handset configuration per type for the OfficeServ 7100 IP Pbx are as follows This allows you to connect a multitude of different handset and phone lines depending on which technologies you choose. If you opt for the latest IP handsets but still want to keep your existing PSTN Telstra line services you can. When youre ready to migrate to SIP trunks VoIP phone lines the system can seamlessly accommodate that as well. You are able to connect the maximum phone line numbers below for a total of 30 phone lines.

The exact line composition will determine this so please speak to a sales representative if you are approaching maximums This means that all Samsung handsets are universally accepted across the entire range as well as having common software. Most expansion often takes the form of additional sites and even if you reach limits in one location, the OfficeServ 7100 IP pbx can link multiple systems and users across the one network of sites. The Samsung Office Serv 7100 IP Pbx offers VoIP trunking phone lines. SIP is the premium VoIP connection method for SME and delivers phenomenal call quality and stability. VoIP or SIP phone lines are not to be confused with IP users one is phone lines the latter relates to handsets. Also its important to note that just because you choose VoIP phone lines you dont need to implement IP handsets as the OfficeServ 7100 is a hybrid like previously mentioned. In fact, we have customers of various sizes that like the idea of VoIP but dont want to implement it straight away. Instead, they elect to keep their existing PSTN or ISDN 2 phone lines until theyre ready in the future. When you consider VoIP, its important to have a proper analysis done. Not only to address your location and availability of SIP trunks but also a genuine savings analysis. If a company cant tell you accurately from a previous phone bill how much youll save with VoIP, dont take their word for it. Factors like your existing phone call rates and the types of calls you make can massively affect the individual savings you could expect. As a rule we find that VoIP suits about 70% of customers with the balance achieving no benefit whatsoever even worse off in some cases. With the Office Serv 7100 IP pbx you have the luxury of still having the latest features no matter which phone lines you ultimately decide to deploy. Wireless IP handsets are a great way to ensure mobility for staff while still providing them all the systems features away from the office.

<http://www.drupalitalia.org/node/73410>

Its refreshing to see affordable IP wireless handsets available on SME solutions like this because there are lots of small businesses that have warehouses, retail stores etc that really benefit from wireless mobility. Do your own investigation because there are pros and cons to each option. For example, there can be phenomenal benefits in spending the extra money on IP if you have remote locations, a lack of existing phone cabling or simply like the plug and play offered with IP technology. It simply comes down to size. In early releases the OfficeServ 7100 was limited to 32 IP users and the Samsung OS 7200S phone system was capped at 64. With such a divergence the size delineation was clear. Now the 7100 can accommodate 56 IP users versus 64 you might be better served upgrading to the OfficeServ 7200 not the 7200S. If you are operating digital or analogue phones its a different story as the OS 7200S pbx can accommodate 64 of either type only 36 with the 7100. If size and extra VM and AA capacity are irrelevant then stick with the cheaper OfficeServ 7100 pbx solution. Configurations Incidentally the OfficeServ doesnt natively support HD Video anyway. Even if you are implementing IP phone handsets in the office this has no bearing on the NBN and is solely contingent upon your internal network infrastructure. Wifi Access with the OS 7100. This can increase the range of mobility well beyond traditional cordless phones and is much cheaper to deploy than expensive DECT rollouts and base station repeaters. This allows for your desk phone and mobile to ring at the same time when you call the one office extension. So no matter whether your staff are, in or out of the office, theyre always contactable. With this you can have access to the phone system and its features anywhere you get WiFi or 3G services. The technology is so progressed that some manufacturers like Avaya even offer Video conferencing and GEO location services with their applications.

<http://asiguere.com/images/bosch-wfp3300-manual.pdf>

If you have a genuinely mobile workforce then you should spend time investigating what options are currently out there in the market. This is perhaps the biggest game changing technology available today. This way you get a virtual phone handset on your PC screen that acts and performs just like your real office desk phone even if you dont have one. This application is great for people that travel around but if youre looking at remote worker in a fixed location then a straightforward Samsung IP handset is perhaps the easiest way to go. The Samsung 7100 voicemail allows staff to intelligently route callers with different greetings and employ call routing based on time of day, day of week, caller ID and DDI Direct In dial numbers. This means you can have different messages automatically configured for every eventuality. Or letting your callers messages play on the handset speakerphone before you decide to intrude and pick up the call. You get the idea. This way you staff can easily listen to, respond, transfer and forward voice and email messages quickly and efficiently. No more waiting to get back to the office and no more excuses. This presents as a WAV file and can be played anywhere you currently receive your emails laptop, Smart phones, iPhones etc. It can even perform skill based routing to an individual or group that may be best served to take particular type of call. The Samsung CMS application can then measure and report on all this information for both live response times as well as historical information. Incredibly this technology is even available on the small business 7030 pbx. Yes solutions like Hosted IP Pbxes offer it for next to nothing but again it illustrates how far the technology has trickled down to these affordable Samsung Office Serv small business phone systems. This is the technical ability of your OS7100 pbx to communicate with your computer network and PCs.

<https://asidicelabiblia.com/images/bosch-wfo2465gb-manual.pdf>

This allows you to do things like OfficeServ Call can interact with a range of TAPIbased applications such as Outlook and allows users to perform such functions as dialling from Contact List, Screen Pop, Missed Calls, and also acts as a personal BLF Busy Lamp Field for staff. You dont need a PHD to use it and you can quickly change features like Extension BLF, Divert Target, Divert Condition and Personal Speed Dial and more. That means no call out or programming charges and will significantly reduce the TCO over the life of the Samsung 7100 pbx system. Once we understand how your SME business operates, what youre trying to achieve, and your future plans, we can then make intelligent and well conceived suggestions. We can suggest which technologies will suit your business and how they operate in a practical sense. Infiniti telecommunications is not affiliated with the manufacturer of this product in any way.
