The actual Open Box product may differ in packaging and included accessories, but has been tested to ensure basic functionality. Now, 10 months later, the RMA'd came back and is working fine, 2 boards the on board audio quite working, on 1 the NIC quit working and I have one that is working fine.<http://charitablewines.org/uploads/caddx-nx-8-installation-manual-pdf.xml>

In the end, these boards have cost more money in time and shipping and I should have purchased a better board and will do so in the future. I will never use ECS boards in the future. BUT 3 out of 5 fail. Something is definitely wrong. Save your time and money and try a little better product. Went with the Axxxxck motherboard that worked rather well. For games I am running a X850XT AGP card and am having NO problems. I just used it for plc programming development so it was fine for that. When my primary machine started to get too old and develop some problems I decided to move the ECS into its spot. I wasn't real impressed until I changed out the memory to DDR400 512M from DDR333 256M. I plan on upping the memory to 1G. It is doing a fine job so far. Has handled everything I can throw at it. One of the SATA plugs went out on me but only have one drive so switched to the other without a problem. Don't believe the voltage readings they are not accurate at all. Again temps seem high for the type of performance I am getting out of it. Overall very happy. Click here for more details. Secure shopping made faster. Check out with PayPal.
